STATE PROFESSORS ON THE AIR

An opportunity to match brain power with State's profs is given those who listen to "Professors are Human" on station KGO, Tuesday nights at 9:30.

Conducted by two former State students Bob Sweeney and George Fenneman, who act as m.c.'s, the following profs are given a quizzing Mrs. Ruth Witt-Diamant, Dr. Elias Arnesen, and Dr. Sommerville Thomson.

It's worth listening to.

DR. STANLEY W. MORSE LEAVES TO JOIN NAVY AS LIEUT.

Dr. Stanley Morse, professor of physical science, and a veteran member of the State faculty, left this week for the University of Arizona, where he will attend the Naval Indocrination School.

Dr. Morse was commissioned a Lieutenant and became the seventeenth faculty member to leave for the service. He was granted a leave of absence from the college.

Always active in both student and faculty affairs here, Dr. Morse was sponsor for Sigma Alpha Eta, honorary scholastic society for men from its inception. He was also an air raid official at the college, and one of the best supporters of the State athletic teams among the faculty.

FORMER STATE STUDENT A HERO

Lt. Victor J. Lewin, a student at State about three years ago, was being acclaimed today by the official Army newspaper as one of the latest heroes.

Lewin, who received his wings at Mather Field last year, has been doing considerable flying over Sicily as part of the invasion of that island.

Onone occasion, his bomber was shot down 65 miles from the African coast and Lewin and part of his crew were picked up by an English seaplane. Previously, in action over Palermo, two of his plane's engines were destroyed, but he brought it safely back to the base. He has taken part in several air raids over Europe and was recently awarded the Oak Leaf Cluster for his work. He was recommended for the Distinguished Flying Cross.

MUSIC WORKSHOP BECOMING REAL INSTITUTION AT S. F. STATE

The State Music Workshop is fast becoming an institution, and there are three reasons to prove it.

First, there is the reappearance, year after year, of the same familiar faces. In this, the sixth year the Workshop has been in existence, there is one boy, William Jackson, who is attending for his fifth time. A great deal of his interest in his instruments was inspired by his work here.

In addition, three students are here for the fourth time; they are Beverly Gehring, clarinet; Bill Boggot and Joe Terzian, trombone. All are serious about studying music. There are nine students here for the third year, and 27 who are enrolled for the second time.

A second reason for the Workshop being an institution: numerous persons who attended the workshop eventually came to State and most of them became music majors.

The third reason is an outgrowth of the second. The Workshop has three student teachers this summer who were Workshop inmates themselves in the first years of its existence. These are Mary Jane Morrow, cello; Alice Dostie, flute, and James Lindsay, clarinet. It is interesting that the Workshop meant enough to these people to come to State and eventually teach in the Workshop.

The Music Workshop's purpose is to promote interest in young musicians and bring students to the college. In both of these respects it has been successful.

INVESTIGATE POST SESSION

With the beginning of Post Session little more than two weeks away, the counselor's office urged all those planning to attend to call there immediately.

Prospects are for one of the best sessions in recent years, according to Dean P. F. Valentine, who directs the Post Session.

The next issue of the Summer Stater will give a complete story of the courses and faculty for the three weeks.
